STEALTH JIHAD THROUGH HALAL

"Conquer the world through Halal movement"
~ Mustafa Ceric - Mufti of Bosnia-Herzegovina ~

Halal is an Arabic word that means permissible. A Halal certified product means that the product is permissible or acceptable in accordance with Islamic law.

Whenever you buy groceries from the supermarket, it’s quite possible that you’re paying an Islamic tax. This tax, masquerading as Halal Certification, is a modern version of an Islamic tax called ‘jizya’. This tax was imposed on people conquered by Muslims who did not wish to convert to Islam. These people were ‘dhimmis’, subjected to many restrictions and humiliations in addition to paying the punitive jizya.
Muslims, who are only 3.6% of the Canadian population, now control over 50% of our food industry. Iconic names and brands like Campbell’s Soup, Cadbury, Nestle, Kraft, Kelloggs, Olymel (also Flamingo) are among the household names in Canada collecting this jizya-like tax from non-Muslims.

Just because you do not eat meat does not mean that you are not eating food or consuming a variety of other products that are certified Halal and for which fees have been paid. Any product you now buy may be Halal certified. You’re probably only safe when you're drinking alcohol or eating pork!

We are witnessing a Muslim takeover of an increasing share of the food industry and other industries, with consequences on the job market. Halal products include not just meat, but also a long list of goods containing slaughterhouse by-products like gelatin and collagen, which are ingredients in many diverse foodstuffs – from Easter eggs to cat food - as well as cosmetics, toiletries, pharmaceuticals, and many other products. It is a multi-billion dollar industry, and growing.

One Halal expert, a Muslim, predicts that worldwide profits realized by imposing these costs will eventually exceed one trillion dollars, a not insignificant portion of which goes to supporting violent Islamist organizations that seek to impose Sharia law globally.

And if this isn’t enough … Halal disrespects the ones the Quran calls “People of the Book”: Jews and Christians. According to Jewish Dietary Laws (Talmud Avodah Zarah 29b) and for Christians (Acts 15:28-29), consuming foods offered up to idols is forbidden.
The mainstreaming of Halal across the world constitutes part of a global Islamization drive. While we don’t object to Muslims following their own religious practices, non-Muslims must be free NOT to do so. Christians and other non-Muslims should have the freedom to make an informed choice about whether or not to eat meat that has been religiously slaughtered according to sharia. Having a chicken’s neck twisted to face Mecca while a verse is recited from the Qur’an by an appropriately certified person at the point of slaughter is objectionable to many non-Muslims.

There are three key reasons for concern about the increased presence of halal products in Western societies:

- Denial of choice, unless products are labeled and alternatives offered;
- The imposition of Islamic practices on non-Muslims;
- Animal welfare concerns relating to halal slaughter

The leading Halal-food certifier in North America, the Chicago-based Islamic Food and Nutrition Council of America, says it certifies more than 23,000 products and ingredients ranging from meat and poultry to pharmaceuticals, chemicals, healthcare, cosmetics, household cleaning products, etc. and the array extends so far from food that it can rightfully be considered a “tax racket”.

Helping to fund the spread of Sharia Law in Australia

Do Muslims celebrate Easter, no of course not, but why miss a good opportunity to tax a dhimm? www.halalchoices.com.au
With the Halal industry, we are experiencing Islamization on a large scale for the first time in the West. Great numbers of people are forced to live according to Sharia law whether they like it or not, which is the essence of Islam and its supremacist nature.

Christian Concern reported the words of the Operation Nehemiah Halal Campaign, run by the Barnabas Fund:

"There is an open campaign by Islamic food agencies to integrate halal into the mainstream market and to extend it to non-Muslims. The World Halal Forum held its annual conference in London earlier this month (November), and has identified the UK as a pilot project for halal in Europe...

The spread of halal is often part of the commitment to Islamic mission (dawa) and the Islamisation of non-Muslim societies. The imposition of sharia practices on non-Muslims may be interpreted as an act of Islamic supremacy."

Islamic Tax – Halal

Halal food by itself is not of concern. Nearly all food is naturally halal (permissible under Islamic sharia law) and observant Muslims can make food of unknown origin halal by pronouncing 'bismillah' over their meal. What is of concern, however, is the recent invention of Halal certification schemes.

The extent of this Islamic 'tax' becomes clear when we understand who contributes to these schemes:

- Many dairy companies, like Saputo, Gay Lea, Salerno
- Over 75% of poultry suppliers
- Over 60% of abattoirs processing sheep - Alberta, New Zealand, Australia
- More than 50% of abattoirs processing cattle
- Generalists like Unilever, Nestle, Kraft, Campbell’s, Cargill, Maple Lodge, McCain and many more
- Finance, Insurance, AIG, CIBC, Wood Gundy, Zero Mortgage Co.
The global market for Halal-certified products and services is estimated to be worth more than USD2.3 trillion, expanding by 20% per year. As noted above, these schemes are not limited to food alone, with products and services ranging from halal certified cosmetics to water, trucks, warehousing and sharia finance. There is no limit to the schemes. Plans are in place to certify every step of the market from suppliers of animal feed, to food processing and eventually the transport to your supermarket and shopping bag.

Companies believe non-Muslims do not care and pass on the extra cost to consumers. Few products are labelled as certified Halal, when in fact most meat and dairy produce bought in supermarkets, or when eating out, are now Halal certified for a fee. There is no other religious group imposing such a broad, tax-like scheme on our supply chain.

Halal food contributes to three significant problems – independent of animal cruelty or religious issues.

- The first problem is an employment fairness issue. Halal slaughter requires that Muslims perform all halal rituals. The end result is that Muslims begin to “take over” food production jobs of a nation. The idea that Muslims – who wish to convert or subjugate non-Muslims – control any aspect of non-Muslim food production is disturbing.

- The second problem is a terrorist funding issue. All Halal products require the monetary purchase of Halal certification from a major Muslim entity – and some of that money inevitably supports terror efforts against the West.

- The third problem is a Muslim immigration scam. Evidently, halal slaughter requires Western nations to import halal butchers from Muslim nations. The scam is that the halal butchers QUIT as soon as they receive their Western immigration status – requiring the constant importation of halal butchers from – you guessed it – Muslim nations.

How the Halal Takeover Happens
- Start demanding Halal food (in daycares, schools, universities, prisons, hospitals, military, sports events);
- Offer your certification process;
- Collect the Halal certification money from companies;
- Pay no taxes because it is a religion;
- Feed the money to terrorists’ groups
What Can We Do?

Canadians must demand that all Halal products, especially meat, be clearly labelled as Halal in English (or French where applicable). A label such as “This product is Halal Certified” should be clearly displayed on the product in a size that a consumer can easily note. Such limited labelling is feasible and should be mandatory. There must also be alternative options for Canadians who do not wish to support the Halal industry.

Ideally (but sadly not practical due to space constraints), every customer who buys Halal meat would be provided with the following information:

"This animal was not stunned, nor was its spinal cord severed when its throat was cut while an Islamic prayer was chanted. A Muslim must chant (in Arabic):

"In the name of Allah; Allah is the Greatest," before slitting the throat of a fully conscious animal with a knife, and while facing the direction of Mecca. It was then hung to bleed out while fully conscious. All Halal requirements have been met, and this meat is now suitable for Muslim diets.

Agencies Collecting Certification “Fees”

This is a very extensive report prepared by Marc Lebuis of PointdeBascule to educate the citizens of Canada on the impact of the Halal movement.

Halal Certification Fees Fund Terrorism

Halal food must be blessed by an imam. There is a fee to certify food as Halal before it can be sold. So Muslim organizations are collecting huge amounts of money, some of which ends up in the hands of terrorist groups. This Video, with Marc Lebuis, Director of PointdeBascule, outlines an investigation into Halal Meat Certification funds and CBN News has discovered that some of the money made from Muslim halal food sales is funnelled to fund terrorist activities.

IRFAN (The International Relief Fund for the Afflicted and Needy)

IRFAN had its charitable status revoked when it was shown to be funding terrorism. The money was going to Hamas. The amount of money was believed to be just over 14 million dollars (CAD). In addition, IRFAN was also providing goods and services to Hamas. The two funding channels together (goods/services + cash) came to just over 30 million dollars. IRFAN continued its operations despite losing its charitable status. Consequently, IRFAN was declared a terrorist entity in Canada by the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) and was shut down.

ISNA (The Islamic Society of North America)

ISNA operates out of Mississauga, Ontario. It had the charitable status for one of its charities (ISNA Development Foundation) revoked for funding terrorism (Jamaat-e-Islami and/or its armed wing, Hizbul Mujahideen). This is in relation to the Kashmir conflict between India and Pakistan.

Two other ISNA-associated organizations have also had their charitable status revoked.
https://globalnews.ca/news/4490892/cra-suspends-fines-major-islamic-charity-over-concerns-it-may-have-provided-resources-to-armed-militants/

ISNA lost its charity status as a result of funding terrorism. ISNA is a Halal-certifying agency. This is yet another reason to require that ALL Halal products and restaurants be clearly designated as such, because those who are not Muslim and/or who have a concern that some of their money may be going to finance terrorism have a right to make a decision NOT to purchase Halal. Concerns about funding terrorism are not hypothetical; we now have proof that at least one such agency is believed to be funnelling money to terrorism.

Did ISNA have charity status for their Halal certification business? If so, it would have made it even more lucrative. It would appear that they at least get a deduction for that portion of Halal certification fees that they declare as donations to charity. We probably need more clarity on what all their profits fund, e.g., building mosques, etc.
Also, we should look at the other agencies that provide Halal certification and find out whether CRA has in the past revoked their charitable status, what organizations they are affiliated with – and any activities they are involved with.

The articles at the links below suggest that Islamic organizations can get back their charitable status once it has been revoked. The evidence linking a Halal-certifying organization to terrorism presents us with an opportunity to push the Government to require Halal labelling, including identifying the certifying agency, and in a place and size that will be immediately visible to buyers/patrons. (Campbell's soups, for example, have a tiny indecipherable symbol on the bottom of the package that you would need a magnifying glass to see!).

ISNA Halal Certification Services

Since 1988 ISNA® Canada has been providing Halal Certification Services (HCS) to the Muslim communities not only in Canada and the United States but throughout the Muslim world. CRA suspends, fines major Islamic charity over concerns it may have ‘provided resources’ to armed militants

A major Canadian Islamic organization has been suspended and fined by federal charities regulators following an audit that raised concerns it had “provided resources” that may have been used to support to armed militancy. It denied any links to terrorism and said it had “made progressive and important changes” to its governance and “how we operate as one of the largest Muslim organizations in Canada.”

How ISNA-Canada's 1st female chair hopes to overcome a major scandal

In 2013, ISNA-Canada’s members were shocked when a Toronto Star investigation revealed that the Canada Revenue Agency had revoked the charitable status of an affiliate organization, ISNA (Islamic Society of North America) Development Foundation, after discovering it had sent some $280,000 worth of donations to the Hizbul Mujahideen — a Pakistani group with connections to violent militants in Kashmir. ISNA-Canada was also audited when this was discovered.

Although the Islamic Society of North America-Canada is serving a one-year suspension imposed by the Canada Revenue Agency, it was approved for 2019 Canada Summer Jobs funding. ISNA-Canada is one of only two Canadian non-profit groups currently serving suspensions, meaning it cannot issue tax receipts to donors.

Muslim Halal Food Sales Supporting Terrorism?

"Nearly 60 percent of halal food is controlled by organizations belonging to the Muslim brotherhood," Alexandre del Val of France explained. Halal food has been a brilliant political and business strategy for the Muslim Brotherhood. "The food was two victories in one. We split people. We divide two societies inside a society. And we make money too," he said.

No, Halal is not the same as Kosher

Kosher Slaughter

- All kosher meat must be slaughtered by a G-d-fearing Jew who is trained in the art of Shechitah (ritual slaughter). Shechitah is an art, with very specific regulations laid out in the Talmud and the codes of Jewish law. Even the slightest wrong move and the animal is Treif, forbidden.
- Kosher slaughter must be done with a special knife, called a Chalef, which is sharpened to perfection, ensuring a smooth and seamless cut.
- Kosher animals undergo a rigorous post-mortem inspection to determine that they were fit and healthy up until the moment of slaughter. This process is called Bedikah.
- There are certain parts of animals that Jews are forbidden to eat. These parts must be removed in a process known as Nikur.
• Kosher meat is salted (or koshered), a procedure that removes all blood from the meat.
• Kosher meat is produced under the watchful eye of a mashgiach, a supervisor who verifies that everything conforms to Jewish law. Kosher supervision and certification also ensure that nothing non-kosher has been added to the product.
• Kosher food must be processed on equipment that does not contain the slightest trace of non-kosher food

HALAL Slaughter

• The animal to be slaughtered must be from the categories that are permitted for Muslims to eat.
• The animal must be alive at the time of slaughter.
• In general, all forms of stunning and unconsciousness of animals are disliked. However, if it is necessary to use these means to calm down or mitigate violence of animals, low voltage shock can be used on the head only for the durations and voltage as per given guidelines. Stunning through a device with a non-penetrating round head, in a way that does not kill the animal before its slaughter, is permitted, provided that certain conditions are adhered to. Please refer to DHCE Halal Standards for more details.
• The animal must be slaughtered by the use of a sharp knife. The knife must not kill due to its weight. If it kills due to the impact the meat may not be permissible.
• The windpipe (throat), food-tract (oesophagus) and the two jugular veins must be cut.
• The slaughtering must be done in one stroke without lifting the knife. The knife should not be placed and lifted when slaughtering the animal.
• Slaughtering must be done by a sane adult Muslim. Animals slaughtered by a Non-Muslim will not be Halal.
• The name of Allah must be invoked (mentioned) at the time of slaughtering by saying: Bismillah Allahu Akbar. (In the Name of Allah; Allah is the Greatest.)
• If at the time of slaughtering the name of anyone else other than Allah is invoked (i.e. animal sacrificed for him/her), then the meat becomes Haram “unlawful.”
• If a Muslim forgets to invoke the name of Allah at the time of slaughtering, the meat will remain Halal. However, if he intentionally does not invoke the name of Allah, the meat becomes Haram.
• The head of the animal must not be cut off during slaughtering but later after the animal is completely dead, even the knife should not go deep into the spinal cord.
• Skinning or cutting any part of the animal is not allowed before the animal is completely dead.
• Slaughtering must be made in the neck from the front (chest) to the back.
• The slaughtering must be done manually not by a machine, as one of the conditions is the intention, which is not found in a machine.
• The slaughtering should not be done on a production line where pigs are slaughtered. Any instrument used for slaughtering pigs should not be used in the Halal slaughtering.

The Rise of Halal

Rotterdam: Port halal certified

Last year it was announced that the port will have the first distribution center for halal food in Europe. This terminal will be used only for storage of halal-approved import products from Indonesia and Malaysia. The port is the first European port whose products can be distributed while fully complying with Islamic religious laws.

The Rise of Halal Tourism
For one of the fastest-growing sectors of the global travel industry, there is no pork on the hotel dinner menus. There are flights with no alcohol on the drink carts, resorts with separate swimming pools for men and women, and daily itineraries with built-in break times for the five daily calls to prayer.

Islam-friendly coconuts: has Malaysia's halal drive gone too far?

Coconuts do not automatically spring to mind when it comes to food fit for consumption by Muslims. However, with the aim of becoming a global halal hub, Malaysia has tapped into the potential of extending the definition of halal to cover transport, cosmetics, pharmaceuticals, health care and even banking. “Halal is beyond food and beverages – halal is a lifestyle,” said the agency’s CEO.

When I heard that Quebec sugar shacks are submitting to Islamic law, I had to make a video. Let's pay attention people; we are quickly losing our culture. Also, you'll see in this video that if we were to turn the tables and request the same from the other side, we quickly realize that multiculturalism is a one-way street.

Halal Expo - Anne Marie Waters

Ann Marie Waters is at a Halal Expo in the United Kingdom – a celebration of the normalization of religious slaughter of animals. 94 million animals were slaughtered in this manner last year in Britain. Our law says that animals must be stunned before death. In halal, the animals are slaughtered without any stunning so they are fully awake. Warning: The video contains scenes of halal slaughter which are very disturbing.

Boycott Halal with Pat Condell

“If you are like me and you are dismayed at the effect Islam is having on our fundamental liberties by stifling public debate in this way and if you believe that Islamophobia and the religion of peace are already strong contenders for the most shameless lie of the 21st century but you feel too intimidated to say something publicly, then there is still something you can do and the Thought Police cannot touch you for it because nobody has to know.

I make it a point of principle never to buy anything that is certified Halal because every time I see that word, I feel degraded by the cruelty of it and shamed by our society’s moral cowardice in not banning it as the criminal activity it is like importing African Bush meat.”

Jamie Glazov talks with Kirralie Smith about her documentary: Halal Certification - The Unpalatable Truth

The majority of products that we buy in supermarkets are now Halal certified. Money raised from this certification goes to Mosques, Islamic schools and charities. These charities are one of the 3 main conduits funding extremist and terrorist activities. In Canada, ISNA was found to be funding $15million (CAD) to Hamas and had its charitable status removed. More than 60% of certification in France goes to the Muslim Brotherhood.

Halal Certification - The Unpalatable Truth

Q Society of Australia Inc and Halal Choices present this new documentary exposing the unregulated mess that is the Halal Certification industry in Australia. The members and volunteers of QSA have been at the forefront of informing Australians about halal certification schemes for many years. In return they have been vilified, threatened, attacked and sued. This documentary goes behind the scenes and shows the activists, the politicians and the consumers, who are impacted by these devious schemes.

Where the Most Influential People of the Halal Lifestyle Industry Meet

The Canadian halal food market is estimated to be worth over USD$1.2 billion. It’s a market that is growing in importance as Canada’s Muslim population of 1.5 million is increasing at roughly 13% annually.

According to INTERPOC studies, the world Muslim population continues to grow at rates much higher than many other ethnic groups and in North America specifically, it has already surpassed the annual global growth rate of 2.3% to 2.9%. Consumers of Halal beef and products in North America are primarily Muslims with a growing appetite for new products as they have experienced a rise in disposable income and lifestyle which are then reflected in their purchasing and consumption habits.

Based on a report from Thomson Reuters, the global halal food industry is estimated at USD$2 trillion and it’s estimated that in the future, it could account for 20% of the world’s food trade, making it a most promising sub-sectors inn the world today.
